Smart Money Moves

Have you ever thought about selling your handmade bracelets, starting a snack stand, or creating a fun app? If you have, then you're already thinking like an entrepreneur! Entrepreneurs are people who start businesses, solve problems, and bring new ideas to life. Here's why learning about entrepreneurship now can help you both today and when you grow up.

Entrepreneurs find solutions to everyday problems. For example, Yvette Ishimwe from Rwanda noticed that many communities lacked access to clean water. At a young age, she founded Iriba Water Group to provide safe drinking water to underserved areas

Instead of waiting for an allowance, young entrepreneurs create ways to earn money. For instance, John Cronin, a young man with Down syndrome, co-founded John's Crazy Socks, turning his love for colourful socks into a successful business.

So make that smart money move now, learn how to start that business you have been meaning to!

Unlocking Innovation

Innovation isn't just about big inventions—it's about finding new and effective ways to solve problems. Richard Turere, a young Kenyan boy, used his ingenuity to protect his family's cattle from lions by inventing a simple but brilliant flashing light system. Just like him, thinking creatively and embracing innovation can make life easier and bring positive change to communities.

To be innovative, start by staying curious and asking questions. Look for everyday problems and think of new ways to solve them. Experiment, learn from mistakes, and don't be afraid to take risks. Great ideas often come from trying, failing, and improving. Surround yourself with people who inspire you, and keep learning from books, experiences, and conversations

From Kelvin Doe building a radio station from scrap to Zuriel Oduwole using filmmaking to promote education, young innovators are changing the world. Every great invention starts with a simple idea. So, keep exploring, experimenting, and dreaming—your creativity could be the key to a brighter future!
